

I object to the proposal that FCC cease regulating broadband service.
If large phone companies are not subject to regulatory review of their broadband pricing, it is likely that independent ISPs would be priced out of the DSL market. Consumers, such as myself, would lose this choice and the benefits of independent service.
this would mean that the to like Sonic.net